The awards continue to flood in...

This is one of Bath's premier restaurants, with an elegant interior set in a stunning high-ceilinged Georgian building, with three magnificent glass domes towering above you. It's worth a visit for the decor and ambience alone - the perfect accompaniment to the outstanding, reasonably priced cuisine. The professional, friendly service is an excellent taster for the fresh, aromatic food to come.

Over the years, the Choudhury brothers have been on the receiving end of a host of awards and accolades, from Les Routiers recognition to an AA rosette, with lots of glowing reviews along the way. 'This cavernous Georgian hall makes an extraordinary setting, specialising in Bengali and northern Indian cuisine ... crisp, fresh cooking and good ingredients,' wrote The Times. 'This is the place to visit ... outstanding Indian,' said Vogue. And according to the Observer, 'You get your money's worth.' The British Curry Awards 2005/06 voted them among the South West's top five eateries and the top 30 in the UK, while the Good Curry Awards 2007/08 awarded them number one in the South West and a place among the UK's top 30 restaurants. The awards continue to flood in.

The mahal of exquisite Indian cuisine, The Eastern Eye, internationally renowned for its excellence, is definitely not to be missed.
